SECTION A: READING COMPREHENSION (30 Marks)

Question 1: Unseen Prose Passage — "The Courage of the Little Seed" [10 Marks]

A young seed lay hidden beneath the damp earth, wrapped tightly inside its brown coat. It felt warm, safe, and comfortable in the dark. One afternoon, a gentle tapping echoed from above. "Who is there?" whispered the seed. "We are the raindrops," murmured a soft voice. "Wake up! The world needs your shade and your blossoms." But the seed replied, "I am too fragile; the winds above are fierce, and rocks will bruise me." Soon, golden warmth seeped into the soil. "I am the sun," called a bright ray. "Do not fear the light. Without stretching, you will never know how tall you can stand." Taking a deep breath, the seed pushed upward. Its hard shell cracked open. Days passed, and a tender shoot emerged into brilliant sunshine. It realized that every storm brings water, and every hard stone teaches a root to dig deeper. Years later, travelers rested under the cool branches of a magnificent banyan tree, unaware that it had once feared leaving the dark soil.

1. Where was the seed resting at the start of the story, and how did it feel? (1 Mark)
2. What message did the soft raindrops bring to the sleeping seed? (1 Mark)
3. Why was the seed reluctant and afraid to push above the ground? (2 Marks)
4. What inspiring advice did the sun give to reassure the little seed? (2 Marks)
5. Find words from the passage that mean: (2 Marks)
   • (a) Delicate or easily broken: _____ • (b) Grand, noble, or majestic: _____
6. What important life lesson does the seed's journey teach us about overcoming fear? (2 Marks)

Question 2: Unseen Prose Passage — "The Watchmaker's Lesson" [10 Marks]

> Old Mohan was the village watchmaker. His small workshop was filled with grandfather clocks that chimed with deep bells, brass pocket watches that clicked like beetles, and wooden cuckoo clocks that chirped every hour. Mohan did not merely fix gears; he listened to them. One morning, a restless schoolboy named Aarav brought his brass watch. "It runs too slow," Aarav complained. "Please tighten the spring so it runs faster. I have homework, games, and exams; I need time to move swiftly!" Mohan smiled, placed the watch under his lens, and cleaned a speck of grit from the brass teeth. "A watch that races ahead does not give you more hours, Aarav; it only steals your present moment," Mohan said gently. "A clock must beat with a steady pulse. If you rush through life trying to finish everything at once, you will miss the birds singing, the taste of your food, and the smile of your friends."

1. What kinds of clocks filled Old Mohan's workshop? (1 Mark)
2. Why did Aarav urge Mohan to make his watch run faster? (2 Marks)
3. What actual defect did Mohan find and repair inside Aarav's watch? (1 Mark)
4. According to Mohan, what precious things do we miss when we rush through life? (2 Marks)
5. Write True or False: (2 Marks)
   (a) Mohan agreed to speed up the watch spring. [ ] (b) A speck of grit was clogging the brass teeth. [ ]
6. What does this story teach us about patience and valuing time? (2 Marks)

Question 3: Unseen Poem — "The Generous Brook" [10 Marks]

> Down from the snowy crags so high, / Beneath the wide and silver sky,
> A little brook begins to run, / Sparkling brightly in the sun.
> It carries leaves, it carries sand, / Through meadows green and thirsty land;
> It does not hoard the raindrops sweet, / It gives them all to roots and wheat.
> Though jagged boulders block the track, / The river never turns right back;
> It finds a curve, it carves a way, / Singing softly night and day.
> It asks no coin, it asks no praise, / For quenching thirst through summer blaze.

1. Where does the brook begin its journey? (1 Mark)
2. How does the brook show generosity toward roots and crops? (2 Marks)
3. What does the brook do when boulders block its path? (2 Marks)
